Phoenix Modular Grand Opening

Fall Down Shaft at ADM Mill

ADM Milling

A new manufacturing facility for Phoenix Modular Elevator is now complete, and a grand opening and tour of the facility was on March 8, 2017 with a ribbon cutting and refreshments. The new 25,000 square foot manufacturing plant is located in Mt. Vernon, Illinois at 4800 Phoenix Drive. PME is the first resident of the new industrial park. The move was needed because PME outgrew its old location in a former shoe factory in the middle of Mt. Vernon. The new manufacturing site has already increased productivity and efficiency due to the larger production area on one level. This allows assembly and manufacturing areas to be more organized, keeping all inventory line side. Multiple overhead cranes have streamlined the moving of elevators through the shop. Since moving into the new plant, three full-time employees have been added. PME is an elevator manufacturer that produces high-quality, commercial modular elevators. A modular elevator is comprised of a steel hoistway with the elevator car and components completely pre-wired and installed inside. They are manufactured horizontally, trucked to jobsites, craned into place and installed in less than a week. CEA News Crew

March 6, 2017 a man was critically hurt when he fell down an elevator shaft at a near west side Flour Mill Monday morning. The 46-year-old man fell down the shaft in the 1300 block of West Carroll Avenue about 7:50 a.m., according to the Chicago police. "An employee was found at the bottom of an elevator shaft at our flour mill in Chicago" according to a statement from a spokeswoman for ADM Milling. He was taken to Stroger Hospital in critical condition.
