BABY DIES AFTER STROLLER FALLS DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT

NEW YORK Thursday October 13th A baby died after a mother and her child fell several feet down an elevator shaft. The 21 year old mother was on the 23rd floor waiting for the elevator. Family members said the 1 month old was in a stroller. Police said when the doors opened the mom pushed the stroller into the elevator but it wasn't there. The baby's grandfather is being as strong as he can for his daughter during this unthinkable tragedy. His daughter and granddaughter fell several feet onto the top of the elevator car. It then went down and stopped on the 15th floor. The baby girl was pronounced dead at Coney Island Hospital where her mother was being treated. Investigators discovered that the building has had dozens of elevator violations over the last 15 years. It is privately-owned and supplies low income housing. Residents in the 24 story, 335 unit building said despite numerous complaints, nothing has really been done to make the elevators safe and reliable. CNN

Otis recently sold its 500,000th Gen2® elevator, which the company says speaks to the model’s innovative design that features an energy-efficient drive, easy installation and flat belts (rather than traditional ropes) to minimize vibration. Gen2 has become one of Otis’ best sellers in its 163-year history, with 250,000 units sold by 2012. It has been installed in more than 180 countries and territories. Manufactured in Gien, France, the 500,000th unit will be installed in a structure in Germany. Otis
